Bloggin' Furls and maybe RSS

The title sounds a bit like that condition that you might get from playing too long on your keyboard however Blogs and Furls and the associated RSS could well become the next big things in ICT. Many of us are now becoming cognisant of blogs, or weblogs as an interesting way to present to the world. Furls are a fantastic way to store those favourite URL's in a way that makes them searchable from any internet connected computer. This session will explore how teachers and students might use these tools with particular reference to science.
